- Breathe. Just stop and think where you're running towards. Is it towards something you need or something you think you need?
- The NLSIU seems to think it does not have an obligation to students, but even one student being denied equal opportunity is a failure on the part of an educational institution which hopes to create social engineers.
- The decision has been a shock to educators, parents, students, and all those in the field.
- Focus on your preparations for CLAT with positive affirmations. For now, CLAT seems to be a safe option to bank on.
- Your dreams are more valuable than a name. It's time to let go of the label mindset.
- Do your research and have flexible options. Curriculums now promise more than a vanilla law degree.
- Universities now have evolved beyond streams. Soft skill trainings, multi-disciplinary approaches, and a futuristic curriculum are the deciding factors of the law culture and tradition.
- Parents need to look at the world from their children's perspective.
- Emphasis on learning over teaching, and cohort size suitable for a smooth transition, and faculty-peer interactions are other factors to look into while searching for your ideal law school.
- It's okay to not know. What matters is that you'll always have a support system of your people around to whom you can talk to.
