Main
Takeaway

Digitize, digitize, and digitize all the way!

Introduction

For India, growth is an element of macro-economic stability, as is the fiscal deficit, current account deficit, or inflation. In this budget, the Government has provided a stimulus to the economy in the backdrop of visibly slowing global economic growth, including India.

While India fulfils its global responsibility, how will Budget 2021 propel its global image? Does it have its play on geopolitics? Join us in this thought provoking conversation with Dr. Jagdish N. Sheth- Charles H Kellstadt Professor of Business at Emory University, Goizueta Business School & Chairperson, Jagdish Sheth School of Management, on 14th February at 9.00 pm IST.

Takeaway Learnings

- The Budget 2021 is well-balanced, benefitting all sectors. It supports the ‘Vocal for Local’ ideology.
- Sectoral recovery will not be uniform. Consumer economy and other informal and unorganized sector will grow.
- India has performed well despite restrictions on resources and infrastructure during the pandemic to establish itself as a global superpower.
- Work will return, but its developments as contracted employment will be limited.
- Vision gives hope and aspiration that a nation can perform. Human capital always adds innumerable value to a final product.
- The budget supports self-reliance, which will not only benefit the country, but also promote export-import transactions of the nation.
- Our knowledge dissemination through literature and philosophy is world-class. Sciences and Ayurveda are our strongholds.
- NEP was very liberating from an imprisoned education system. It welcomed practical applications to theoretical perspectives and a liberal framework in professional programs.
- It has bloomed institutions to grow into universities and faculties into educators for life.
- The budget will support new researches and centers no doubt. But will it be enough?
- Main emphasis on higher education must be to make it open and accessible.
- E-commerce will become a global giant with the right infrastructure.
