UNIVERSITY HIGHLIGHT

Youth Conclave: Empowering Young Minds for Nation Building

Vijaybhoomi University hosted the India Youth Conclave for the first time under the Ek Bharat Hum Bharat initiative, inspired by Maitreya Dadashreeji. The conclave brought together over 120 students from eight schools and colleges across the Raigad district, creating a vibrant platform for dialogue, creativity, and collective purpose.

The programme opened with a thought-provoking panel on The Role of Youth in Nation Building, followed by an inspiring presentation on the Ek Bharat Hum Bharat journey, emphasizing self-discovery, competence-building, and service to the nation. Aligned with the Vijaybhoomi University's philosophy of "Learn what you love, and love what you learn," students engaged in hands-on workshops across AI, Music, and Clay Modelling, presenting innovative ideas and creative expressions for India's future.

A symbolic human chain and a collective pledge to dedicate time to national service marked the conclave's powerful conclusion, reinforcing unity, responsibility, and youth-led nation building.

Rahul Purohit Excels at the National AI Olympiad

Rahul Purohit, a second-year student at the Vijaybhoomi School of Science and Technology, delivered an impressive performance at the National AI Olympiad (Advanced Category). Encouraged by his mentor Dr. Salur Srikanth Patnaik, Rahul approached the challenge with a strong focus on fundamentals, logical thinking, and consistent practice. His disciplined preparation paid off, earning him a score of 54/70 (77.14%), a State Rank of 24 in Maharashtra, and a National Rank of 179.

Beyond the rankings, the experience strengthened Rahul's confidence and problem-solving approach, highlighting the transformative impact of mentorship and perseverance on academic growth.

SCHOOL HIGHLIGHT

Phantom Harmonics Masterclass at True School of Music

True School of Music hosted an enriching masterclass with jazz-fusion band Phantom Harmonics hailing from Osnabrück Institute für Music, comprising Srijan Srivastava (piano/composer), Anina Batz (vocals), Noah Weber (guitar), Daniel Moris (bass), and Joel Jacob Korevaar (drums). Known for blending jazz, pop, and classical influences, the band engaged students beyond the stage by visiting classrooms to jam and share their experiences as music students.

During the session, they performed Route 66, Crazy, and their original You Should Know. A collaborative rendition of Bag's Groove featured TSM students, emphasising improvisation. Post-performance, Daniel Moris and Anina Batz conducted bass and vocal workshops, introducing improvisation through bass concepts, circle singing, and scatting.

Payal Kumari Explores the Practice of Law at the Civil Court, Khagaria

Payal Kumari, a third-year student at VSoL, completed an insightful internship at the Civil Court, Khagaria, Bihar, under Advocate Ganesh Kumar Ganapati. The experience offered her a first-hand understanding of courtroom dynamics, from civil and criminal hearings to witness examinations and drafting affidavits. She also gained practical skills in legal research, case briefing, and procedural law, strengthening her analytical and communication abilities.

Payal describes the experience as a turning point that bridged classroom learning with real-world advocacy, teaching her the values of discipline, ethics, and empathy essential to practicing law effectively.

Side Hustles Are the New Internships

Why "doing" beats waiting in the age of AI

Gen Z undergrads are stepping into a job market that doesn't behave like a syllabus. AI is rewriting workflows faster than universities can update curricula. Roles appear, mutate, and disappear within a single degree cycle. In this churn, one question keeps surfacing in classrooms and hostel rooms alike: How do I become market-ready before the market changes again?

The old answer was the internship. The new, more powerful answer is the side hustle.

Side hustles are no longer about extra pocket money or weekend experiments. They are fast becoming the most reliable way to acquire real, demonstrable competencies, often more relevant than formal internships. In an AI-disrupted economy, what you can do matters far more than where you trained.

Traditional internships were built for a slower world. Side hustles flip this equation. A side hustle is outcome-driven. You are hired to solve a real problem. There is no training manual. Learning happens in motion.

"Doing" is the new credential. Employers are persuaded by proof of work.

For Gen Z undergrads, the message is simple:

Don't ask if you're ready. Along with your degree, start doing in 2026, and readiness will follow.

Happy New Year!
